ED LEE WATCHES PENSIVELY as a fireman sprays still more water on the charred remains of his office, which burned to the ground early Monday morning in a blaze that lit the skies above Robinson Canyon for hours. The wall at right is all that remains of the frame structure, which included a garage, tack room, studio, tool shed, luggage room and, most importantly, the office where Lee worked as an investment counselor. Behind Lee is his house, which was not damaged.

TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Since we're such conscientious workers to keep Carmel Valley at "Peace and Quiet" and the ROSCO Group is busy watching that all Roble's residents live according to their beliefs, tell me -- Why don't we try to lift up instead of push down?????

I've got a project that just might help keep Peace and Quiet even a few years from now.

The kids themselves have been working hard at various service projects such as the Puppet Show they put on for Campfire Girls, Children's House and others. They have been serving their church and community by planting flowers and weeding, by ushering at Church functions and washing dishes. Most of the parents of these active children do not attend church, but they help on various projects with driving, etc.

There is a wonderful Christian Camp called Mount Hermon located in the Santa Cruz Mountains. This camp practices good fellowship under leadership of many local faiths. Most of the cabins in Redwood have been donated by religious leaders and churches of different Christian Creeds.

Tickets are now available at the Carmel Valley General Store as well as through any Youth Fellowship Student or leader in the Carmel Valley Community Chapel for a Mother's Day breakfast. The proceeds of this Mother's Day breakfast will help pay a child's way to this camp. To keep our good kids from being bored and getting into situations that they don't get into when they're busy let's offer them a good busy Christian opportunity.

By lifting and helping our fellow beings, be they children or older, we plant seeds that will produce good not only for our Valley, but the individual who passes our way. May God help us to be ones who move ahead with time so that our purpose in life may be stronger than to hold back those who need help forward.

Thanks,
EVELYN RHOADES

Dear Editor:

We are a family of six, and almost everything we own was in the house we have lived in for five years. When the house was badly burned three weeks ago, we faced the tasks of salvaging and cleaning what was left, replacing what we could, and finding a temporary place to live.

So many people came to help us, friends, neighbors, some we hardly knew or did not know, to share with us their time and energies and resources, in an example of real caring, that the feeling of loss and tragedy which we might have felt has been replaced with a warmth more valuable to us than the possessions that we lost.

To list the names of all those who helped us would be impossible, for we don't know them all. Therefore, we hope that this short letter will express our sincere gratitude and thanks to the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department and to our friends and neighbors. May God bless you all.

Sincerely,
TOM AND RUTH VALPEY

Bad fire on Robinson Canyon Road

$10,000 loss at Ed Lee property dramatizes fire protection dilemma

"I DON'T EXPECT TO FIND ANYTHING at all in there," Ed Lee said Monday morning as he stared at the ruins of his office. "It's four years of my life, that's all." The office burned along with a studio and garage early Monday morning. Lee fought flames with a garden hose while waiting for firemen to travel the 9.3 miles from Carmel Hill to his house. And he kept on using the hose as the small pumper trucks shuttled back and forth to a hydrant .7 of a mile away for more water. It was too little and too late for the office and garage, but his home was spared.

A devastating fire gutted the combination office-studio-garage belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Lee on Robinson Canyon Road early Monday morning.

The spectacular blaze, discovered shortly before 3:30 a.m., sent flames shooting 30 feet into the air to singe the tops of nearby sycamore trees. Six hours later firemen were still dousing smouldering embers amid the charred rubble.

Damage was estimated at $10,000, but Lee said that was only "a rough guess." Prized antique furniture, hundreds of books, irreplaceable manuscripts written by Mrs. Lee's father and all kinds of sporting and camping equipment were lost.

But all that was insignificant compared to the real loss—Lee's office. Financial statements, charts, reference materials, correspondence—it was all gone, representing four years of work by Lee as an independent investment counselor.

"I have some of it in my head," he said with a wan smile. "That part I can put down on paper again."

DOG SOUNDS ALARM

The frantic barking of the family's dog, Rogue, awakened Mr. and Mrs. Lee, who looked across their bedroom to see the reflection of flames dancing across a framed picture.

The State Division of Forestry at Carmel Hill reported receiving the first call on the fire at 3:29 a.m. Two 500-gallon pump trucks left Carmel Hill at 3:31 a.m. and arrived at Lee's home, 9.3 miles away, at 3:41 a.m.

A pick-up truck was also dispatched, making a total of three men and three pieces of equipment. This was more than would normally be available for a fire call this time of year. "It was just by accident," explained the dispatcher at the Carmel Hill station, "that we had an extra man and his truck here that night. Since that man happened to be sleeping here, he went out on the call too."

The fire, feeding on what Lee called the "well seasoned" frame building, was well underway when the three firemen arrived. "There was nothing much they could do about that building," the dispatcher explained, "so they concentrated on saving the house, 20 feet away."

NO MORE WATER

The pump trucks spewed out their 500 gallons of water in about two minutes. Then, because there are no hydrants on Robinson Canyon Road, the trucks had to leave the scene and go fill up with water again at the nearest hydrant—.7 of a mile away at the corner of Dorris Dr. and Center St., behind Safeway.

The round trip to get more water took about eight minutes. And in the interim Lee was left in the painfully absurd position of standing on his front patio in his pajamas fighting a fire by himself with a garden hose.

He made no attempt to enter the flaming structure to save anything from his office. "It was too late," he said sadly. And he had nothing but praise for the hours of effort put in by the three firemen, who not only saved the house but installed a giant fan to blow smoke away from the house.

"Naturally it wasn't their fault that we don't have hydrants," Lee said. "But it is a rather silly way to have to fight a fire."

The shooting flames were seen by residents more than a mile away. The Carmel Hill dispatcher said his phone was "really ringing for awhile" with calls from alarmed neighbors, and Fire Chief Chip Collins reported that the Carmel Valley Fire Department also received several calls on the fire.

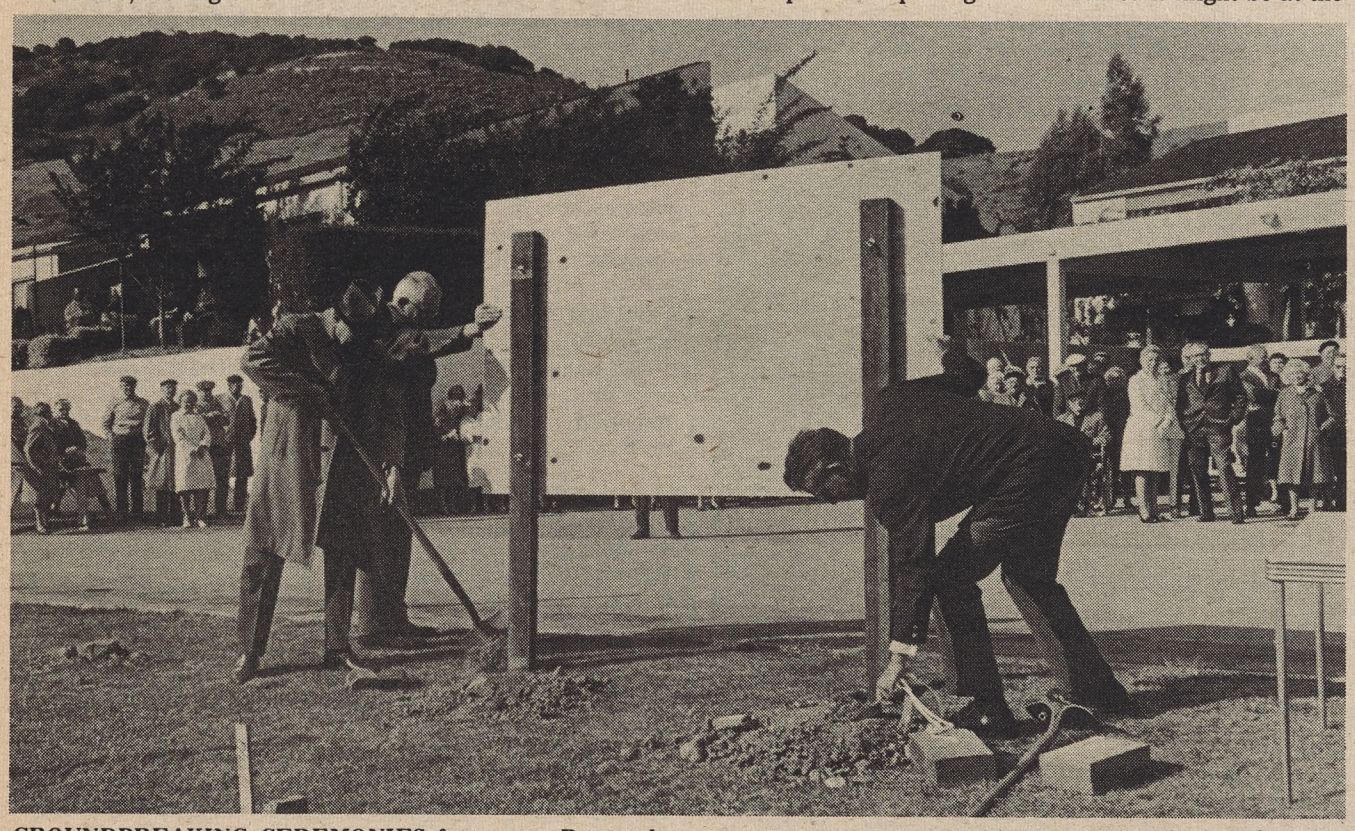
Because the mid-Valley is not included in the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, Collins could not respond. He was not asked for mutual assistance by the Forestry Department because the fire was too well underway to save the building anyway.

Some persons reporting the fire feared it might be at the home of 103-year-old Perry McDonald, who lives across the street from the Lees. A woman who lives on Berwick Drive said she thought "all of Robinson Canyon was going up in flames."

The cause of the fire has not yet been determined, but Lee suspects old wiring may be to blame.

Among the many cruel ironies to the fire is the fact that Lee, presently vice president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, has been among those advocating better fire protection for the mid-Valley.

The CVPOA board appointed Stephen Thigpen of Tierra Grande to investigate the possibility of the mid-Valley forming its own fire district, or possible annexation to the Carmel Valley Fire District. Thigpen said Monday that his committee, composed of Russ Stolfi, John Pomeroy, Rich Wenzlik, Dr. Bruce Ryan and Roger Fulton, will meet later this week to discuss various proposals.



GROUNDBREAKING CEREMONIES for a new Personal Care Unit attracted a large crowd of Carmel Valley Manor residents Saturday afternoon. The unit, to be known as Hillcrest House, will contain 24 individual rooms for residents who need minimum care for life but are not acutely ill. The project is expected to be finished in September, at a cost of over $300,000. Here George Hamilton, who was chairman of the residents' committee for Hillcrest House, turns a shovelful of dirt while William Williams, president of the residents' council, and Hugh Davey, president of the board of directors of the Manor, adjust the sign announcing the project. CARMEL VALLEY EMERGENCY CALLS

The Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department dispatched 15 men and four pieces of equipment last Wednesday when a fire broke out at the home of Carroll Smith at 58 Panetta Road at 10:16 p.m.

The fire started when a wood plate around a heatalator in the fireplace caught fire, which in turn ignited the wall. The blaze was quickly extinguished and damage was estimated at $300.

The department's Red Cross ambulance also made three trips to Community Hospital during the week.

At 9:42 p.m. last Wednesday, Mrs. Gina Welch was transported from her home on Esquiline Road to the hospital as a medical emergency. Thursday evening at 9:58 p.m. the ambulance took Murray Draper of Rancho Road to the hospital.

Saturday at 5:56 p.m. the ambulance was called to the scene of an automobile accident 10 miles east of the Village. Mrs. Mollie Balamuth of Berkeley, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ball of Los Angeles, were taken to Community Hospital with minor injuries suffered when their car was hit head-on by one driven by Glenn Williamson, 24, of 233 Mortimer Lane, Marina.

Williamson was charged with drunken driving. A passenger in his car, Richard Brown, 24, of 3076 Sunset, Marina, was also injured, but refused hospital treatment.

Those taken to the hospital were all riding in a car driven by William B. Balamuth, Mrs. Balamuth's husband, who was not injured.

A RECORD ATTENDANCE crowded Carmel Valley's Little League Field on Saturday to witness the opening of the 1971 season despite the windiest weather ever recorded in League History. Roger Sherman emceed the ceremonies which had been planned by Mrs. Sherman. Rev. James Brock gave the invocation.

Teams accompanied by their coaches, managers, and sponsor representatives marched onto the field and were introduced to the stands, after which they repeated in unison, the Little League Pledge.

An impressive portion of the program was the presentation by Gen. Ernest Easterbrook, son-in-law of the late Gen. Joseph Stilwell, of a new flag to the League from Mrs. Stilwell and the family of the famous General. A number of years ago, the Valley Little League accepted with the pride the flag from Gen. Stilwell's casket. The gift from Mrs.-Stilwell has flown at each ball game since; to now be retired and displayed in the trophy case of the new soon-to-be-completed snack bar.

Gen. Easterbrook presented the new flag to a Boy Scout Honor Guard made up of Steven Savoldi, Peter Grover, Don Meharry, and Gary Ricupero who raised it over the Field while the Tularcitos Band played the Star Spangled Banner. The band and Chorus also provided pre-game entertainment under the direction of Mr. John Farr. The Volunteers beat the Lions in their 1st game, 9-2. The Indians won the 2nd game 3-2 over the Tigers.

FOLLOWING A HONEYMOON along California's northern beaches Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leonard Kline are at home in Los Ranchitos. Their many Valley friends were not in the least surprised that a garden which has such special meaning in both of their lives was where the private mid-afternoon ceremony was performed by Judge Richard Sims on April 3.

Lois, the former Mrs. Robert C. Robinson, was one of the founders of the Garden Association; while Chuck, who formerly owned Valley Hills Nursery, is now the assistant manager of the botanical gardens at the University of California. Presently a teacher's aide at Tularcitos Elementary, she is a graduate of Katherine Gibbs School in New York and Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. Her father, Stephen L. Nordlinger is a resident of Valhalla, N.Y. He is a graduate of New York Botanical Garden School and California State Polytechnic College, and was once an exchange student at Montreal Botanical Garden.

Attending them in the garden of the Kentfield home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Kent were the bride's son, Christopher Robinson, a student at the University of California at Santa Barbara, and Robert J. Bowen of Orinda.

ANTICIPATION of the celebration which officially marks the end of each sports season is just a part of the successful Tularcitos recreation program directed by Coach Herb Reuter. Each boy, regardless of whether he is on the League winning team or not, is honored for his attendance at practice, participation in games, and sportsmanship at a party planned by his coach. Last Sunday boys were guests at the Upper Circle home of Mr. and Mrs. Reuter for a hog dog barbecue.

Members of the four basketball teams, Pistons, Chargers, Pintos and Panthers, enjoyed an afternoon of softball and various games of skill for which prizes were awarded to Tony Scardina, David McKenzie, Jeff Johnson, Ronnie Gayman, and Steve Rammel. MR. AND MRS. ROBERT JOHN REINER

The bride, Georgia Mae Galloway, daughter of Mrs. Florence Kari Galloway of the Valley, and Capt. Harry Galloway, Mesa, Ariz., and the groom, Robert John Reiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reiner of Redding, had been married at a 1:00 o'clock ceremony on April 17 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church. Rev. James Brock officiated before an altar banked with white glads, white mums and apricot carnations.

Georgia was given in marriage by her brother, Byron Galloway of Honolulu, Hawaii. Her gown was of white crystalline organza with an empire bodice, and full sleeves gathered at the wrists. Her embroidered lace mantilla was purchased by the bride in Madrid during her stay in Spain while attending the University of Valencia. Her nosegay bouquet of white rosebuds was tossed from the top of the Diner's wrought iron circular staircase which was entwined with Mexican paper flowers.

It was caught by Miss Roberta Little who was in charge of the guest book. Bob also tossed the traditional blue garter from the top of the stairs caught by ring bearer, Kevin Donohoe of Dublin. Kevin's sister, Laurie was charming in a long gown of yellow and passed the miniature bags of almonds to the guests.

Attending the bride were Mrs. James Keown of Carmel, the matron of honor, in an apricot gown designed like the bride's. Bridemaids, Mary Alyce Cobb of Long Beach, and the bride's cousin, Liz Barr of San Francisco wore mint green.

Georgia is wondering if a white goat at one's wedding is a good omen ... not only did one invade the dressing room where she and her bridesmaids were dressing for the ceremony, but it also sampled the wedding bouquets and insisted upon attending (without an invitation) the nuptials!

The groom's brother, Gene Reiner, a student at Cal Poly served as best man. Ushers were Malcolm Jepson, San Francisco, and Raymond Plumb of Monterey.

Orchid corsages were brought from the islands by Byron Galloway for his mother, who wore a pale green silk suit, and for the groom's mother, who chose an orchid silk coat and dress. Michael Read entertained with Flamenco guitar during the reception planned by Mrs. Diner and Mrs. Lucille Hobson. The groom's aunt, Mrs. Ronald Anderson of Redding served the wedding cake.

Other out of town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. John Reiner and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Anderson, all of Redding; Mrs. Rebecca Dycus, the groom's grandmother from St. Louis, Mo., Carl Holm, the bride's grandfather from Morro Bay, Mrs. Jack Lundin, Los Gatos; Mrs. Gertrude Peak, Aberdeen, Wash. and the surprise arrival of friends from Junior High and High school days who drove from Tacoma, Wash., Mr. and Mrs. Dennis MacNeeley and Mrs. James Short.

The couple plan to make their home in Mill Valley.

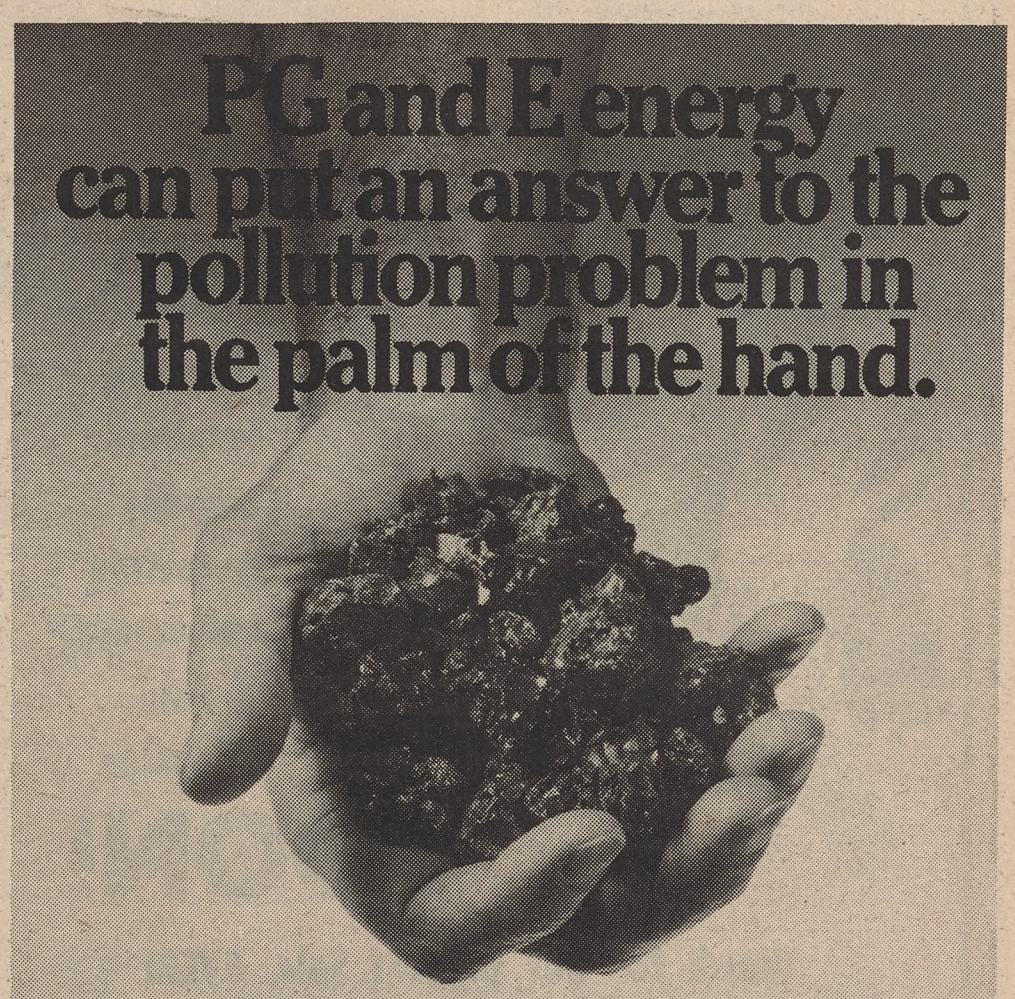
PG and E energy can put an answer to the pollution problem in the palm of the hand.



This handful of clean slag represents ten pounds of trash after being reduced by natural gas in a large scale disposal plant. Such plants handle almost any kind of waste—from food scraps to bottles and cans.

Systems that will clean-up our air and water, recycle or dispose of wastes and power rapid transit will require more and more clean energy—natural gas and electricity.

Our job is to be sure there'll be plenty of energy for these environmental jobs; our construction program for new facilities is carefully planned to meet energy demands adequately and reliably as needed. PG and E

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

A pet who has been a dearly loved member of the family for many years occupies a unique place in your life. He is an individual, with his own personality, habits, likes and dislikes, and he fits into a niche in your home that is especially his own.

Because of his uniqueness there is, in our opinion, no such thing as "replacing" a pet who has died. You can replace an old pot or a worn chair, with another, similar item because pots and chairs don't have personalities; they aren't animate. But when a dog or cat dies and people start to think about getting another, they do so because they miss their old friend and hope to fill the void his passing left.

Frequently, when a family pet reaches his golden years, his owners contemplate getting a puppy or kitten in the hopes that the loss, when the old pet goes, won't be as keenly felt.

While we're not sure this reasoning holds up under fire, bringing a young animal home where there is an aging pet can be a good idea.

We are reminded of a couple who had 13 and 14-year-old Siamese cats. The eldest cat, a male, was discovered to have terminal cancer and eventually it was decided that the most humane thing to do was put him to sleep.

As soon as the remaining cat realized that her companion was gone, she stopped eating and took to spending the days in a crouched position, refusing to do anything. Her worried owners took her to the veterinarian who decided that she was mourning her lost friend and that there was nothing to be done to rouse her from her lethargy. He advocated putting her to sleep.

Her owners were terribly distressed; they had just lost one dearly loved cat and the idea of losing the second was too much to accept. They asked the vet if getting a kitten might help, but he did not think it would.

The cat's owners weren't convinced, however. They contacted the owner of a litter of Siamese kittens and explained their problem. Eventually, they bought a young male kitten and, full of half-hopes, took him home to their old cat.

Within an hour the old cat was curled up around the kitten, purring and licking him. She began to eat again and to go out and play with the new kitten. She had, in short, a new lease on life.

Now, this is a particularly dramatic example of the good a new pet can do. In this case, the old cat had given up already and there was nothing to lose. On the other side of the coin, bringing a new animal home can cause the old pet to sulk, refuse to eat and act very much the injured soul. Usually, this behavior is temporary.

If you decide that you'd like to get a young animal and already have an oldster, there are things you can do to ensure the older pet's acceptance of the newcomer.

Your old pet must be allowed to feel that he's still Number One. Dogs and cats tend to grow increasingly sensitive as they age and they are prone to hurt feelings.

No matter how cuddly or appealing or frisky the new pet is, you must steel yourself against his rambunctious young charms for a while. The natural tendency is to get down on the floor and romp with the new puppy or kitten and ignore the old, more staid pet.

Don't ignore him. See if you can lure him into romping with the newcomer. If he refuses to join the fun, forego the romp for a while and pet the old animal and talk to him. Give him a treat, make a fuss over him. Tell him that he's far more sensible and loyal and loving than that silly new baby. He'll understand that he's still important and special to you.

The average young puppy or kitten has no sense of propriety or property. Make sure that the youngster doesn't intrude on the older pet's privacy; don't let the youngster stick his nose into the other's dinner, or appropriate his bed or special toys. These intrusions tend to hurt the older animal's feelings.

Eventually, the older pet will come to realize that the newcomer is no threat to his security or position with the family. He'll probably get to like the new pet in spite of himself and soon they'll be romping together.

Which is great for everyone concerned -- for the new pet will have found a friend and a playmate and a teacher, and the oldster will get his stiff muscles limbered up and his blood circulating again ...

But even a jolly new playmate is no permanent halt to aging. Nothing is. And for all the wonderful care and attention you've given him, there may come a time when your old pet becomes seriously, chronically ill.

There are many wonderful drugs and treatments now available to pets that were unheard of years ago. But veterinarians are not magicians, and sometimes all their skill and knowldege cannot help.

The day may come when modern veterinary science can do no more than keep your pet alive, and that is the hard day when you have to do some unselfish thinking.

There are people who are so selfish in their love of a pet that the most important thing to them is keeping it alive at all costs. They think only of their grief at losing the animal and not of its pain and suffering.

Should the time come when all you can do for your pet is prolong its suffering by prolonging its life, there is one final, unselfish thing you can do for him.

You can make yourself realize that for an old, worn out, pain-wracked friend, a peaceful death is the ultimate kindness.

Euthanasia is a word full of emotion; but it is an act of love and understanding. To take an old friend on a final visit to his veterinarian, to hold him in your arms to comfort him, and to have him fall peacefully alseep is far from the terrible thing some people believe it to be. To the old dog or cat to whom life has become an unhappy burden, it is the most generous and loving gesture left for you to make.

Behavioral Sciences Institute to benefit from Eastwood Tourney

The Behavioral Sciences Institute of Monterey will co-sponsor with Del Monte Properties Company the Clint Eastwood Invitational Tennis Tournament at Pebble Beach July 3, 4 and 5.

B.S.I. opened in 1965 as the Monterey Institute for Speech and Hearing and has grown from a small hearing center to an advanced facility for teaching reading and language skills to pre-school children. The institute also serves as an evaluation center for children with learning problems.

Under a format created last year by Del Monte Properties Company president A.G. Michaud, the tournament is a joint venture of the company and a designated charity. Players are selected by Eastwood and his tournament committee.

This year's field is expected to attract 64 players, including many of Hollywood's top tennis stars, as well as rated amateurs from the better tennis clubs in California.

Highlights of the three-day weekend are the traditional welcoming party hosted by Michaud and Eastwood, a gala dinner dance sponsored by the institute and the annual pier barbecue and fireworks at the Beach and Tennis Club.

It's the same old story on hillside zoning as

County supervisors shoot down two ordinances

BY PAT GRIFFITH

Members of the CVPOA and kindred spirits who would like to regulate development on Carmel Valley hillsides have a lot in common with the unhappy bear on the Andy Williams Show.

Week after week, the bear pleads, cajoles, teases, begs, threatens and above all persists in asking for a cookie. And week after week, the answer comes thundering back: "No cookie. Not now. Not ever. Never!"

And that's the way it was last week in Salinas, again.

It wasn't a cookie the conservationists were after, but -- seemingly for the zillionth time -- a hillside zoning ordinance that would prescribe conditions and limitations for hillside development.

They didn't get it.

First they lost out on a Hillside Planning Ordinance when the supervisors refused, 3 to 2, to refer it to the Planning Commission for study and eventual adoption.

Then the old Hillside Conservation Ordinance, which has been kicked around so long it should be encased in pigskin, was killed when Supervisor Willard Branson couldn't muster a second to his move for adoption.

It was a familiar scenario, with a script tailor-made for the bear. Only nobody, winner or loser, was laughing.

In a voice cracking with emotion, Branson bitterly noted that "there are an awful lot of people who talk about ecology, but very few who will work for it. I feel it's high time we do something about the hillsides in Carmel Valley ... the things we can best be remembered by are what we don't put on the land ...

"I don't think I'm a sadist for continuing this fight. I think I'm a masochist.

"I'm dedicated to saving these hillsides of Carmel Valley. I'm a supervisor from Carmel Valley, and I don't like people from outside the area telling us what to do.

"I haven't given up the fight on this matter," Branson vowed. "Someplace along the line we're going to have to wake up to reality."

The Hillside Planning Ordinance had been presented to the supervisors as a minority recommendation of a 10-member committee that worked for six months trying to draft a feasable alternative to the earlier Hillside Conservation proposal. It did not include a definition of "hillside" or set any density -- this would have been established when a specific community asked to have the ordinance applied.

STRONG OPPOSITION

Even so, the measure drew strong opposition from landowners and others who felt it was a further abridgment of private property rights, an unnecessary duplication of ordinances already on the books, and an attempt at population control in the guise of conservation.

At last Tuesday's hearing, opponents of any and all hillside zoning ordinances -- past, present or future -- clearly had the edge in numbers as well as acres.

Tim Condon, presenting the case for the board of P.R.O., summed up the deeply-felt opposition this way:

"We stand against measures which, in the guise of hillside conservation, in actuality constitute hillside confiscation. The second objective of these ordinances, population control, has been carefully couched in terms of hillside conservation or preservation by certain vociferous groups who would close the doors on any and all development in the Carmel Valley if they could possibly do so. Our position is that this objective is negative, totally without merit and indefensible."

Condon further stated that "rezoning to more restrictive densities does not preserve hillsides, it merely tends to make development of hill lands unfeasible, lowers the utility and therefore the value of affected properties and eventually undermines the county tax base."

Anything more restrictive than one-acre zoning, he said, could "prevent any future Del Mesa Carmels from ever coming into being.

"We submit that these measures are capable of destroying the incentives necessary to creative hillside planning, and that only by re-examining the grading ordinance and encouraging road standards and development types which are compatible with hillside topography can we properly address ourselves to the preservation of hillsides and open space."

ROAD STANDARDS

The need to re-examine and change road standards was mentioned by several who followed Condon to the microphone, including Robert Flause and engineer Carl Hooper, representing George Bestor & Associates. Hooper gave the supervisors a detailed list of possible changes in road standards and suggested that the board appoint a committee to study the matter.

Andrew Hollenstein, who served on the hillside zoning committee as an appointee of Supervisor Warren Church, concentrated his attack on the HC ordinance on the basis it "might discourage clustering and end up with more individual homesites ... rather than conserve hillsides, this ordinance would desecrate them."

As for the HP proposal, Hollenstein dismissed it as "nothing more than a minority report that doesn't delineate anything."

Flause, who also served on the committee, denounced the CVPOA for claiming to represent "the people" of Carmel Valley.

"I think the things the people want should be put in terms of the needs of the entire Monterey County," Flause argued. "We should be looking to future needs ... and if we don't put certain numbers of people on hills in esthetic ways, we will force development of the Class A farm land in Salinas Valley."

Flause said Carmel Valley residents "have to go with a reasonable density to serve the whole county," and suggested that ST (special treatment) zoning "enables us to obtain all this beauty these people say they want. These people are after density control and nothing else."

Still another member of the committee, Douglas Allmond of North County, also voiced his opposition to both the HP and HC ordinances.

Others giving statements opposed to hillside zoning ordinances were Dr. Joseph Noto, Milton Frumkin of Saddle Mountain Ranch, rancher Bill Lambert, Rancho San Carlos trustee Arthur Oppenheimer and attorney Myron Etienne, who offered a revised revised revised HC ordinance of his own as a "last resort". No action was taken on the Etienne proposal.

PROPONENTS SPEAK

Ed Lee, vice president of the CVPOA and one of the drafters of the HP ordinance, spoke of the "promises" of the Carmel Valley Master Plan and the Monterey Area Master Plan "which show lower densitites in the hills."

Lee said the HP ordinance would meet Carmel Valley's need for a zoning district appropriate for its development under the master plan. Noting that the Scenic Conservation district ordinance had been written for the South Coast, and the N district ordinance for the North County, Lee commented: "It seems to me that Carmel Valley is as entitled to an ordinance tailored to its needs as any other area of the county."

Lee also read statements of support from the League of Women Voters and the Carmel Area Coalition. He said that these groups, combined with the CVPOA, represented over 1,000 people.

"But how many do you think understand it (the ordinance)?" asked Branson.

"I'm not sure anybody understands anything, Willard," Lee replied. "We've restudied and restudied it. People all over the country are rezoning hills to lower densities. Carmel Valley should be able to, too."

Mrs. John H. Hinrichs, representing the directors of the Corral de Tierra Property Owners Association, warned the supervisors "unless we in Monterey County are to go the way of Los Angeles County with mud slides, landslides, erosion and the proliferation of ugliness, we must have some means of protecting our hillsides from permanent, irreversible damage caused by poorly conceived and executed development. Either HC or HP would be a step in the direction of making this protection available.'

Morden Buck, who had been chairman of the hillside conservation committee, had spelled out his support for the HP ordinance at an earlier hearing.

ATTERIDGE SAYS 'NO'

Before the final vote was taken, Supervisor Arthur Atteridge of Salinas announced he would not vote in favor of referring the HP ordinance to the Planning Commission -- the necessary next step if it were going to be adopted.

"I'm not in favor of growth ... or of undue restrictions," Atteridge said. "I think the beauty of Monterey County is because there hasn't been as great a growth as other areas ...

"The attractiveness of the rural area is largely due to those who hold undeveloped land. Those property owners indicate they don't want this ordinance."

Supervisor Loren Smith was the only supervisor to vote with Branson in support of HP. When Branson then moved to adopt the old HC ordinance, which specified a 2½ acre minimum on hillsides, Smith declined to second it on the grounds it would only go down to defeat.

Smith offered to second a motion to continue the hearing on HC to the next meeting, but no motion was made for a continuance.

Supervisor Warren Church next suggested that Branson move to send the SC (scenic conservation) ordinance back to the Planning Commission for revision to meet the needs of Carmel Valley. Church said he would support a revised SC that eliminated some uses now allowed, such as kennels, duplexes, resorts and hotels and mobile homes.

However Branson said he wanted time to think things through before deciding what, if anything, he might recommend next.

His evaluation of HC-HP: "It's dead."

DON WESTER

Carmel Valley man, once national

BY PAT GRIFFITH

The throbbing rummm-rummm-rummm of high-performance automobiles will reverberate through the hills north of Highway 68 this weekend as the Laguna Seca raceway launches its 1971 season with the L&M Grand Prix.

For sheer drama and excitement, it's a scene hard to beat. And few men know it better than Don Wester of Carmel Valley.

Newcomers to the Monterey Peninsula may equate the name Wester only with Wester Volkswagen or Wester Porsche-Audi, the two German car dealerships owned by Don and his look-alike brother, Jim.

But anyone who followed sports car racing during the early and mid 1960's remembers the tall, bespectacled president of SCRAMP (Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula) in a different role -- behind the wheel of a racing Porsche.

Always yellow and bearing the number 60, the Wester Porsche, whatever its year or model, was a familiar sight as it flashed past competitors. Pitted against cars of comparable power, Number 60 invariably won.

From the track at Kent, Washington, to the Riverside International Raceway, from Laguna Seca to Sebring, Fla., the name Wester was synonomous with championship driving.

In a 10-year span, Don went the full route from his first race at Road America at Elkhart Lake, Wisc., which he won, to the top spot as 1966 National Amateur Champion for Class E Modified (cars under 2 liters), which was as far as a Porsche Carrera-6 could go.

His gradual rise to the front ranks of racing closely parallels the development of the sport itself after World War II.

Born in Chicago, he spent his childhood in nearby communities while his father pursued a highly successful career in radio advertising. When the war ended, the Wester family pulled out of Elgin, Ill., and joined the migration to Southern California.

FIRST A MODEL A

As a teenager, Don's favorite pasttime was tinkering with cars. His first one was a Model A, and he later rebuilt a 1939 Ford coupe. But it wasn't until after he enlisted in the Air Force in 1951 that he became totally committed to the automobile as something more than just an engrossing hobby.

The Air Force sent him to a base near Munich, Germany, and there, on the twisting back roads of Bavaria, Don succumbed to the lure of the Porsche.

"In Germany there weren't any speed limits," he recalls, "so you could test a car to its limits, and it was all legal. It went to a lot of the road races, and the Porsches always looked like lots of fun."

When Don came home, a Porsche came with him.

He enrolled at the General Motors Institute at Flint, Mich., where his time was split between engineering courses and on-the-job training at a Chevrolet assembly plant. This routine left almost no time for racing, so he switched into the dealership training program, traded in his first Porsche on a used but somewhat newer Carrera Speedster and started doing time trials and little events in Michigan.

In early 1957, after being licensed to drive at the Road America driving school, he entered his first real race at Elkhart Lake, running against assorted Porsches, MG's and other production sports cars. He won -- and went on to win practically every other race he entered that year, including the premier race at Road America.

AN ELABORATE MODEL TRAIN layout, not racing cars, gets Don Wester's free time these days. Still he can't resist explaining the undercarriage of a model truck, part of the scale scenery, to his young son, Scott. If his father has much say in the matter, Scott will NOT be racing cars 20 years from now. Photos by George T.C. Smith

ONE OF MANY AWARDS attesting to Don Wester's skill and success on the race track is this "Pat Pigott Memorial Trophy" he received in 1963 as the Best Under 2 Liter Driver on the West Coast. Ray Altman, an SCAA governor, is making the presentation. Wester was the first man to receive the trophy, honoring a popular driver who was killed at Riverside in 1962.

"In those early days, we'd just drive the car to the track, take off the hub caps, make a few adjustments, and start the race. We learned everything by experience. When something needed fixing, we'd look in a technical book and read the directions. It meant you had to have a certain mechanical feel for the car."

For Don, in particular, it was essential to understand his car inside and out, because he was in no financial position to buy the latest racing model. For years he drove someone else's castoff, always trading up for power and speed whenever he could afford it.

"GONE RACING"

The early races sped by. After graduating from GM Tech in 1958, Don moved to Monterey, where he spoon opened his own automobile repair shop at 693 Del Monte Ave. specializing in Volkswagens and Porsches. Customers were accustomed to seeing a "Gone Racing - Be back on Monday" sign tacked to the front door on weekends.

In 1960, the two brothers purchased the VW dealership at 1187 Del Monte, and the following year a talented mechanic, Homer Worth, came to work for them.

"Homer could make the car work a lot better than I could," Don says, "and we were a lot more competitive after that."

It was Worth who suggested that Don paint his car yellow "so somebody can see you out there" -- and from then on, yellow was the Wester color.

By then racing rules had been changed, and the No. 60 Porsche Carrera was running against production Corvettes and stronger Porsches. During the 1961 season on the West Coast, Don generally came in second behind a Corvette driven by Paul Reinhart of Oakland.

The next year, driving a Porsche RSK, he placed third in the Riverside Grand Prix competing against the best European drivers. This was the real turning point.

His skillful driving and unquestioned all-round competence impressed the visiting engineers and officials from the far-flung Porsche empire, and he was offered the coveted sponsorship of Porsche Car Pacific and Reynolds C. Johnson, the West Coast VW distributor.

So for the first time, in 1963, Don had a car to match his skill -- an RS '61, the best racing Porsche that could be bought in the United States at that time.

Traveling the national U.S. Road Racing Championship circuit, he waged a nip and tuck battle with Bob Holbert for the title of U.S. Road Racing Champion A broken piston in the second-to-last race ruined that chance, and he wound up the year in third place, behind Holbert and Ken Miles. He was also named Northern California Driver of the Year, an honor he received again in 1965.

More thrills were just ahead. Driving an even better Porsche, Don won everything in his class in 1964 and, for the first time, tried out something different -- a Genie Ford.

Worth rebuilt the Genie during the winter of '64 and when the U.S. Road Racing Championship series opened again in 1965, there was only one car on the track that could beat it -- Jim Hall and his Chaparral.

"He was really a great competitor, with a great car," Don says. "Hall had three cars, so he could always have one at the factory for repairs. We didn't really have a sponsor on the Genie, and so we had one car and an extra engine.

"Even so, we were able to beat anybody except Jim Hall. At Laguna Seca we equalled his qualifying time, but then came in second." (It is ironic that Don, for all his triumphs, never won a feature race at Laguna Seca, his home track.)

THE BEST RACE

The year was not without other compensation, however. Still racing for Porsche, Don celebrated his 34th birthday in memorable style by driving his Porsche 904 to a stunning victory of Phil Hill's Cobra Ford at the championship production car race at Candlestick Point.

"That," Don says smilingly, "was the best race."

The next year, 1966, was to be his last full season of racing. It was the best of all as Don steered a factory Correra 6 to an unbroken string of fictories on the West Coast and National Champion honors for his class.

It was also the year of Don's most tragic experience on the racetrack. Driving for the Porsche team in the 12-hour Sebring Endurance Race, Don's Correra was leading the Porsche contingent after 10 hours when Mario Andretti, driving just ahead of him, lost control of his Ferrari.

As Don sped on, Andretti's car unexpectedly slammed into the rear of the Porsche, catapulting it off the road into the darkness. Within seconds it was a crumpled heap against a building, and four spectators who had been watching in an unauthorized area were dead.

Don had to be cut from the mangled hulk of his car, and was rushed to a hospital where he was treated for a broken ankle and a burned leg.

He considered quitting then. But as the shock and horror subsided, he decided to finish out the season. Finish he did -- as a national champion, the unquestioned top Porsche racer in the United States.

"At the end of that year, the under 2 liter division was eliminated, and Porsche just didn't fit in anymore. I came to the conclusion there wasn't much value in trying to continue. I couldn't afford to compete with the big factory sponsored models."

Another deciding factor was that Worth, who had been battling cancer since 1964, was clearly not going to be able to keep up the pace much longer. Worth had been honored as champion racer, now auto dealer and SCRAMP president

Mechanic of the Year in 1965, and without his help, Don had neither the heart nor the ability to keep it up.

He did enter some races in '67 and again in '68, when he won first in his division at Riverside in a 910 Porsche Roadster.

That was it. He quit.

He had other, more personal, reasons for stopping too. In 1965 he married the former Patricia Ramsey, a gifted dancer and ballet teacher. In the late summer of '66 their first daughter, Stacy, was born, and Don frankly wanted to be able to spend more time with his family at their home on Country Club Way.

Now that Scott and 3-month-old Vicki have followed Stacy, he happily calls himself a "family man" and insists he has no desire to go back to the pressure of the racing circuit.

"I never had any aspiration to drive at Indianapolis," he muses. "If someone is going to make a mistake there, you go over the wall. I always felt that the skill of road racing was the big thing, not just the daredevil stuff.

"I really believe if you want to be a world's champion or a great driver you have to think that you don't care if you get killed making the attempt. I don't want to get killed. I have too much else that's too important."

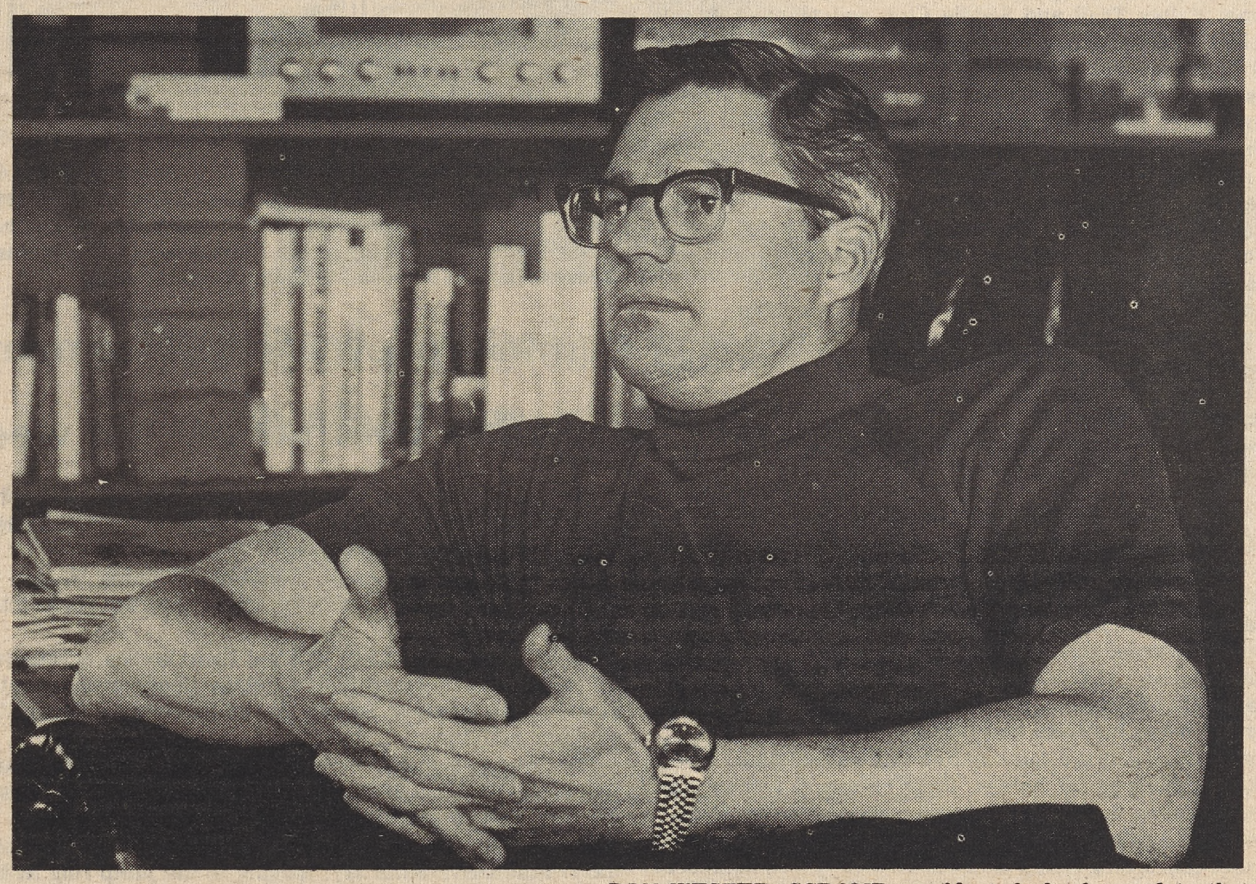
He has no intention of pushing Scott into racing. "I'd rather see my boy be great at football or some other sport. If he's going to be a world champion, I'd like to see him be in the Olympics ..."

Now in his third and last year as president of SCRAMP, which sponsors all the races at Laguna Seca, he has had an opportunity to learn racing from a new angle. Problems of scheduling, attracting top drivers, promotion and final distribution of proceeds to charity confront the SCRAMP board of directors with as many potential hazards as the twisting raceway presents to drivers.

Even with so much to remind him of other days, Don has no twinges of wistfulness.

The plaques and trophies from the racing years are scattered here and there, some at his office, some almost out of sight on a high shelf above a bookcase in the living room. Mounds of clippings and scores of photographs are casually stored in a paper bag, waiting some leisurely time in the future when they can be put into a scrapbook.

"I look back and I know I did it. I had a lot of fun. I accomplished what I set out to do, and I'm proud of it. I enjoyed it, and that's about it."



DON WESTER, SCRAMP president, looks forward to the opening of the racing season at Laguna Seca this weekend. But he has no regrets that he'll be strictly an observer, not a driver.

A NO. 60 YELLOW PORSCHE was the racing trademark of Don Wester during the 1960's. In this Porsche RSK he placed third in the Riverside Grand Prix in 1962, winning him sponsorship for the first time the following year by Porsche Car Pacific and Reynolds C. Johnson Volkswagen.

Carmel Valley riders to compete in Pebble Beach event this week

Over 100 riders are entered in the 32nd annual Pebble Beach Combined Training Event and Hunter Trials to be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Dressage opens the Combine Training Event on Friday, at the Equestrian Center, with the horses performing disciplined routines.

On Saturday, the riders will put their horses across two miles of arduous jumps on the Pebble Beach cross country course, with a return Sunday to the Equestrian Center for stadium jumping.

The Sunday competition is for the riders to demonstrate that after the rigors of the cross country course, their horses are still able to perform at peak ability.

The Hunter Trials will be held at Bird Rock Course along the 17 Mile Drive Saturday, moving to the jump ring at the Equestrian Center on Sunday.

Carmel Valley horse trial competitors include Sally Hudson, Tracy Cotchett, Sue Sally Hale, Laura Cully, Diane Rogers and Nancy Bottero.

New trout fishing season opens Saturday

Barring a storm the last few days in the month, streams and rivers in the central coastal region which will open for trout fishing on May 1 should be in good condition for angling over the opening day weekend, the Department of Fish and Game says today.

In preparation for opening day, the Department is stocking trout in 13 streams in the central coast region, as well as in 14 lakes and reservoirs which are open all year.

Waters to be stocked this week include:

San Luis Obispo County -- Atascadero Lake, Laguna Lake, Lopez Creek.

Monterey County -- Los Padres Reservoir, Carmel River, Upper Arroyo Seco Creek, Lower Arroyo Seco Creek, Upper Nacimiento River, Big Sur River.

Santa Cruz County -- San Vicente Creek.

Local swimmers qualify for finals in Pacific AAU meet

The Cypress Swim Club qualified three duets and a six-girl team in the preliminary figures competiton for the 1971 PAAU Synchronized Swimming Junior Olympics held on Sunday in Castro Valley. These swimmers will compete in the final routine competition for the Pacific Association AAU championships Saturday and Sunday at the same pool.

Qualifying for duet finals in the 11-12 age-group were Debbie Jameson and Stacy Larsen; in the 13-14 age-group, Kathryn Blevens and Gerri Brandly; and in the 15-17 age-group, Kathy Clark and Vicki Shaw.

Interestingly, duet partners Blevens and Brandly, who are 13 and 12 respectively, swimming in different age-groups for the figures competition and before completely different panels of judges, tied with exactly the same score -- a rare occurence in a sport which measures excellence of performance in hundredths of a point!

The six-girl team qualifying for Cypress in the finals is in the 11-12 age-group and consists of Brandly, Jameson and Larsen plus Julie Lipman, Renayda Wolfe and Judy Wright.

In the preliminary meet there were 262 swimmers entered from nine Northern California clubs. Besides Cypress, entries came from the California Coralettes, Hayward Flying Fins, Hayward Synchronettes, San Francisco Merionettes, San Marin Pisceans, San Mateoettes, Santa Clara Aquamaids and the Walnut Crrek Aquanuts.

Out of next weekend's competition will come the Pacific Association Junior Olympic champions for 1971. The top three entries in each event -- solo, duet, and team -- will then be eligible to participate in the AAU Region XIII Junior Olympics to be held at Santa Clara International Swim Center on July 25 and 26.

11-12 Age-Group: Gerri Brandly (7th 22.130; Debbie Jameson (23rd) 18.495; Stacy Larsen (28th) 18.165; Julie Lipman (41st) 16.260; Renayda Wolfe (51st) 15.275; and Judy Wright (56th) 14.195;

13-14 Age-Group: Kathryn Blevens (14th) 22.130; Suzanne Calley (40th) 18.770; and Loria Shaw (62nd) 15.900;

15-17 Age-Group: Vicki Shaw (43rd) 20.510; and Kathy Clark (44th) 20.300.

Approval recommended for 8 new duplexes

The Upper Valley Advisory Committee has recommended that use permits be granted for eight duplexes Larry Cummings proposes to build in the Carmel Valley Village area.

Four of the duplexes will be located on property off Delfino Place, and four on a parcel Cummings owns jointly with Lou Gardner adjacent to Rippling River School.

In a meeting Friday morning, the committee also voted to recommend that the zoning administrator renew the use permit issued to veterinarian Gerald Petkus for a new animal clinic adjoining his present building.

The committee did not take any formal action on a possible 72-square foot sign for the twin movie theater proposed for the "Valley Ford" commercial complex when developer Robert Bolman withdrew his request for design approval.

The property, located on the northeast corner of Ford and Carmel Valley roads, is located in a PCD district -- planned commercial with design control. In a "D" district, signs are limited to no larger than 35 square feet.

Bolman had submitted a proposal through architect Olof Dahlstrand for a 72-square-foot sign that would perch on top of the movie theater, giving it unobstructed viewing from Carmel Valley Road. In a letter accompanying the original application, Bolman said such a large sign is necessary because a movie theater must advertise the movies currently being shown to the motoring public. For this reason, he said, a variance would be in order.

Committee chairman Doyt Early was notified the night before the meeting that the application for a variance was being withdrawn for the time being.

The sign on the front of the Mid-Valley Cinema is 72 square feet, but it does not extend above the building. It was originally installed without any special permission or use permit. Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon later denied the request for the variance, on the grounds there was no special hardship involved, but his ruling was overturned by the Planning Commission.

Slimmon said last week that the new Jerry Lewis Theater at the mouth of Carmel Valley, also a twin movie theater, had just submitted an application for approval of a 35-square foot sign. This sign will be located on Rio Road and will provide sufficient space to list the name of the theater and two movies currently playing.

Both the Cummings' and Petkus' applications for use permits will be considered by Slimmon tomorrow afternoon.

Also on Slimmon's agenda is an application for renewal of a use permit allowing a public stable on 2.4 acres just east of Schulte Road, fronting on Carmel Valley Road. The application is being submitted by Herbert Clough, asking for renewal of a use permit issued to David Grimes on April 10, 1969. This will be heard at 3:15 p.m.

All Saints Day School sponsors Garden Fair on May 15 and 16

The "Garden Fair" is the combined efforts of the Mothers' Club of the school's parents' organization and students of All Saints' Episcopal Day school in Carmel Valley. Professional paintings, pottery, sculpture and macramae created especially for the Garden Fair by art unlimited will be available plus small flowers cast in resin by Mrs. Robert Drennan of Carmel and leather items from a local craft group.

Admission is free, snacks and refreshments will be served all day, all of the craft shops at the Sunset Center will be open. Visitors will be able to see a number of displays of flower arranging, a special feature will be a Bonsai demonstration by Col. Kenneth Burns of Pacific Grove.

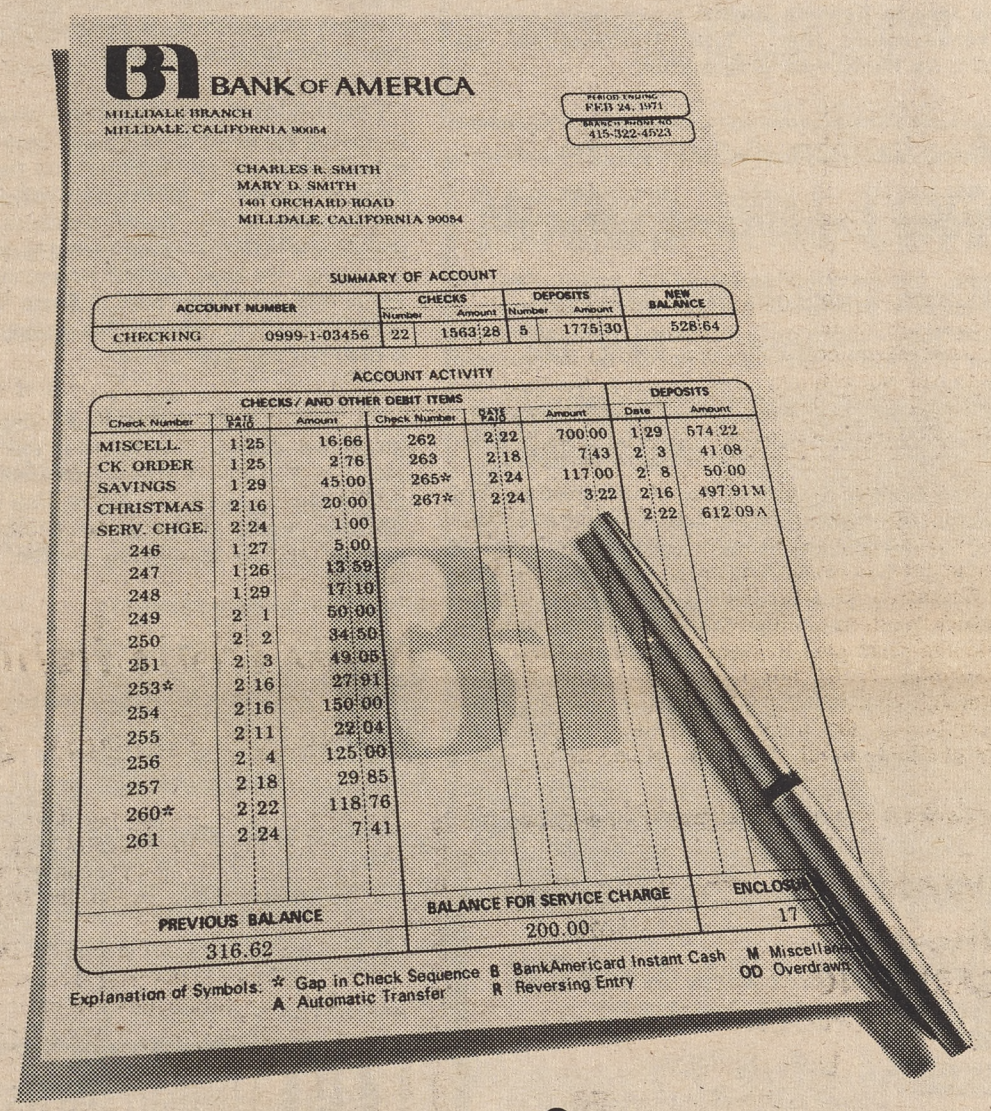
Bank of America strikes a blow for better understanding.



We've streamlined your statement. We've cut out the clutter and made other helpful innovations.

So now you can balance your checkbook quickly and easily. We call it the Timesaver Statement.

1. We're listing the checks on your statement in the order in which you wrote them.

2. You can tell at a glance which checks haven't come in yet. We mark the gaps in your check numbers with an asterisk.

3. We're also listing the checks vertically. Which is the natural way to read figures.

4. And to simplify things still more, we show the only balances you really need — this month's and last month's.

Bank of America is the only bank that makes this statement. No other bank has it. If you like it, ask for it when you buy your checks.

The whole thing's so simple, sometimes we wonder why we didn't do it sooner.

'The Australian Adventure' concludes Explorama season

Explorama, the travel adventure film series, has announced their final presentation of the current season.

"The Australian Adventure", an award winning feature length color film, will be narrated in person by its producer Kenneth Richter. The film will be presented in ten Bay Area cities. In Carmel it will be shown at 8:15 p.m. Thursday and Friday, May 6 and 7, at the Sunset Auditorium, 8th and San Carlos Streets.

The film has been acclaimed as one of the most exciting travel adventure films ever produced. It reportedly captures the spirit of the world's last frontier. Highlights include a 55 miles per hour jeep chase through the bush, strange primitive feather-and-blood corroboree, Patonga Safari Camp, Andamooka; rough and ready opal mining town, Tibooburra; old gold mining town, and the Great Barrier Reef.

The film includes unusual human interest vignettes of the Australian people such as the flying mailman and the flying doctor on their rounds. Also highlights are the stories of the strange blue-black aborigine stockmen and the Willick family and their life on a remote cattle station.

LAST WEEK I told you about the Carmel High School production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel" which opens Thursday night and plays Friday and Saturday also. You will want to relive this delightful musical show with hits like "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," "Carousel Waltz," "You Will Never Walk Alone," and all the rest. It's not too late - call for your tickets now.

In conjunction with "Carousel", high school art students have completed a project in which each was allowed to develop his own concept of the Carousel theme. If you'd like to see what happens when youth "puts its mind on a merry-go-round," visit the theatre foyer between now and May 9.

"Explorama" comes back for its last film of the season on Thursday and Friday - May 6 and 7. This time Ken Richter conducts the audience to Australia. In case you are wondering, "Explorama" has reserved dates for another great season in 1971-72. Season tickets are available now.

AN UNUSUAL PRESENTATION comes to Sunset Theatre Saturday and Sunday, May 8 and 9. This entertainment is sponsored by the Philippines Consulate in San Francisco and consists of a combination stage show and film presentation. We think you will enjoy it. Saturday's performance is at 8:15 p.m. -- Sunday's at 2:00 p.m.

I THINK, TOO, you should now plan ahead into the future by saving the night of Thursday, May 13, to attend our free forum on Astrology. Whether you think of Astrology as a myth, a science, or an art, you will enjoy the introductory presentation of our panel members, and then you may participate in the following period of questions, answers, and discussion. We hope you will accept our invitation to attend. Time, 7:30 p.m.; Date, May 13. Some "Sunset Views" may be in for a bit of pummeling in this session; we hope you will find it both fun and instructive.

IN THE "DO-IT-YOURSELF" department, don't forget that a new class for beginners in folk guitar playing begins May 5 at 7:30 p.m. The new intermediate class also starts a new session on May 5 at 8:30 p.m. Call the office to enroll, 624-3996, and weekly bridge games at 12:15 every Tuesday are open to all. No enrollment needed, just come with your partner.

FINALLY, DO you recall that I told you about going to Cabrillo College to see a Multi-Media production which included projected light, synthesized music, and modern dance? At the time I suggested to the performers that Sunset Theatre would be an ideal place to repeat the performance. Much to my surprise and delight, this has now been arranged.

So on Saturday, May 29, at 8:30 p.m. you will be able to get yourself "turned on" by one of the most delightful, exciting, amusing, and stimulating performances to come this way in a long, long, time. Tickets, with special reduced rates for students and military personnel will be available at Sunset. This is a MUST!

Del Monte Lodge again named one of nation's top resorts

Mobil Travel Guide, for the fifth consecutive year, has awarded Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach, its five-star award as one of the nation's finest hotels. The lodge was cited for its cusine, service and accommodations.

Del Monte Lodge is one of the nine United States resort hotels selected for the award by Mobil's trained field staff in a careful, unannounced inspection, supplemented by the evaluation of special consultants. Mobil also considered reports received from users of their past travel guides in making this award.

In accepting the award, the fifth in his seven years as Del Monte Properties president, A.G. Michaud shared the accolades with B.A. Coleman, lodge general manager; Tom Oliver, resident manager; Pierre Bain, manager of Club XIX; and Edith Clancy, Beach and Tennis Club manager.

Surrounding the 142-room lodge are the Pebble Beach Golf Course, Spyglass Hill Golf Club, the nine-hole Peter Hay Golf Course, one of the most active tennis clubs in California, and the west's largest equestrian center.

In June 1972, Del Monte Lodge will be headquarters for the 72nd United States Open Championship. It is the scene each year of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur Championships.
